

Stylized faces

A stylized face is a face that has been simplified or has parts which have been exaggerated. The steps below show you how to draw a stylized, stretched face with simple features.

Drawing a stretched face

Draw faint guidelines to help you.

1. Draw a long oval shape in pencil. Add almond-shaped eyes about a quarter of the way down the oval.

2. Draw a long, straight nose ending about three-quarters of the way down. Add a small mouth below.

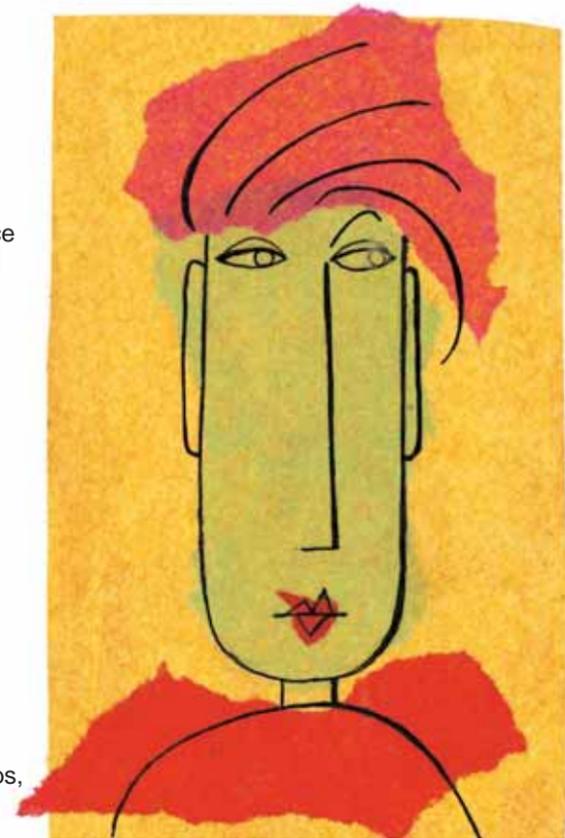

3. Draw long, thin ears about half-way way down the oval. Add eyebrows and wavy lines for the hair.

4. Draw over the face in pen. Leave it for a few minutes to dry. Then, rub out the pencil lines.

Experiment with different face shapes and hair styles.

Add extra pieces of tissue for lips, cheeks or earrings.

A tissue-paper face

Use a light colour for the background.

Use a different colour for each new shape.

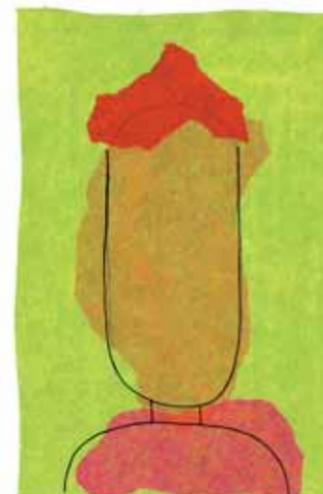

1. Cut out a rectangle of tissue paper and glue it onto a piece of white card. Draw an oval in the middle.

2. For the face, tear out a piece of tissue paper about the size of your oval. Glue the tissue over the oval.

3. Tear out a rough rectangle of tissue for the shoulders. Glue it below the oval. The shapes can overlap.

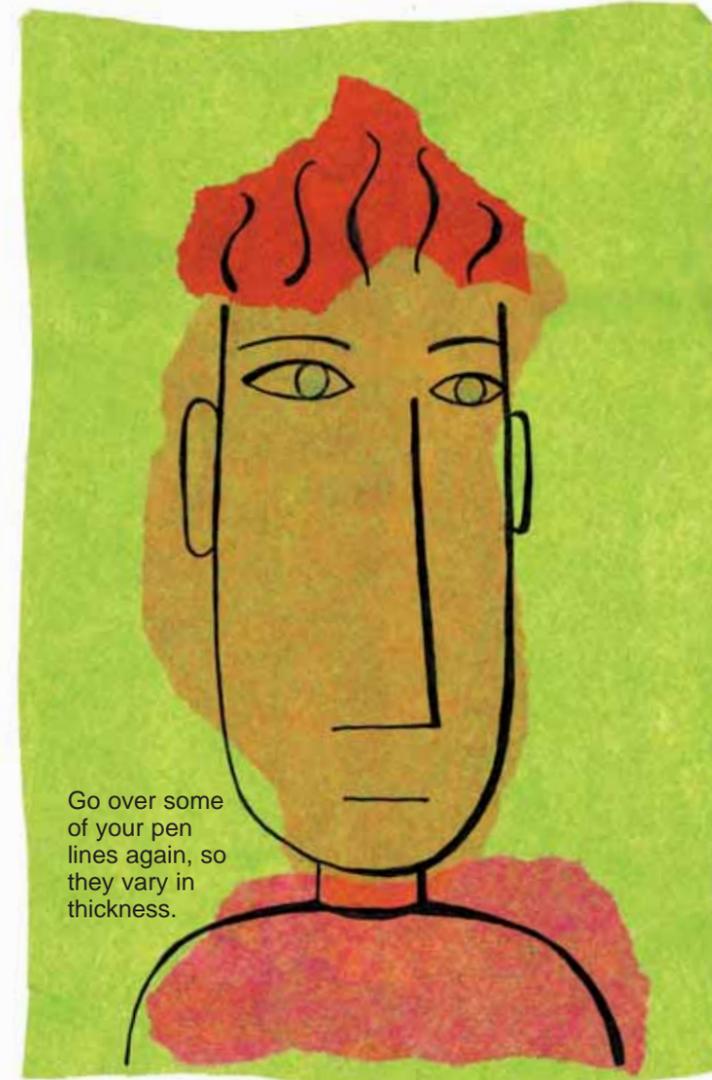

4. Tear out a piece of tissue for the hair. It can be any rough shape. Glue it at the top of the oval.

5. When the glue is dry, draw around the face in pen. Add a curve for the body and two lines for the neck.

6. Use a pen to draw stylized features and hair. You don't have to follow the tissue-paper shapes exactly.

Go over some of your pen lines again, so they vary in thickness.
